THE GUNDIS

Kurdish Kitchen

2909-11 N Clark Street, Chicago

Kurdish . . . Delish!

Wednesday, June 7, 2017 at 6 PM

A collaboration between Mehmet Duzgun, Mehmet Yavuz, Denisse and her father, Executive Chef Juan González, The Gundis Kurdish Kitchen is where Kurdish Anatolian cuisine and the talent of our Chef make their Chicago debut. Here, you can sip black tea and wine, and enjoy the robust flavors of a kitchen that celebrates and shares the food and culture of the Kurds.

Chicago Reader:

Chicago finally gets its first Kurdish restaurant. The proprietors hail from a province on Turkey's southern border with Syria, but the Gundis is no Turkish restaurant...Gundis is a Kurdish word for "villagers" that, when spoken in the direction of someone of good humor, is taken as a playful jab at his country roots. Mehmet Duzgun and Mehmet Yavuz are the two villagers behind the Gundis in Lakeview, the city's sole Kurdish restaurant. The "village" they come from is really a small city called Nusaybin within the province of Mardin on Turkey's southern border with Syria...
